Western Oil Exploration is a disruptive technology company using its proprietary technologies and processes to discover major oil and gas fields worldwide. Their innovative technology allows them to optimally drill for oil, natural gas liquids, and natural gas to maximize production in every well. Western Oil Exploration uses unique technologies and can identify the exact, within 2%, location of hydrocarbons in aerial extent as well as depth and thickness. With this precision, optimal drilling plans are much easier for geologists and petroleum engineers to design and execute. The current prospect they are working on is within the continental United States and shows the potential to produce over 1 billion barrels of oil equivalent in an 18-square mile field.
