

America is Responding: Tell Washington ‘We Say No’ to the Equality Act

For some lawmakers, it’s a message that biblical values matter to Christian voters.

WOODLAND PARK, COLORADO,
UNITED STATES, May 21, 2021

/EINPresswire.com/ -- One pro-life and pro-marriage activist is making her voice heard in Washington, DC., and making it possible for thousand of others to do likewise. She and a group of Christian leaders are giving concerned citizens the opportunity to share biblical truth with lawmakers through a postcard campaign that is piling desks high with messages.

If you stacked them up flat, they would be just about 5 feet on every senator’s desk. They’re going to be noticed.”
Janet Porter of Faith2Action.

“If you stacked them up flat, they would be just about 5 feet on every senator’s desk,” said Janet Porter of Faith2Action. “They’re going to be noticed.”

Porter joined Andrew Wommack, founder of Andrew Wommack Ministries and Richard Harris, executive director of the Truth & Liberty Coalition, on a livecast to discuss a number of issues, including how to stop the ‘destructive and dangerous’ Equality Act.

Christians often don’t know how to influence their lawmakers beyond Election Day, she said. Often, candidates hear concerns about biblical values on the campaign trail, but rarely hear from their constituents once they enter office.

“Educating people of faith to engage in public affairs is important for maintaining biblical values in our society,” said Richard Harris, executive director, Truth & Liberty Coalition.

According to Porter, contacting lawmakers is the key to success in fighting ungodly policies. She said past letter-writing campaigns have overwhelmed Congress. Porter was told the congressional fax machines and email systems could not handle the volume of messages from concerned and active Christians.

Recently, Porter joined forces with a number of other influential Christian leaders to launch a postcard campaign against HR 5, the so-called Equality Act. The bill, now in the Senate, would impose the LGBTQ agenda and pro-abortion policies on Christians organizations against their conscience. It is one of the most destructive and dangerous pieces of legislation in history.

“It’s really the ‘Inequality Act:’ It’s an attack on religious freedom; it’s an attack on women; it’s an attack on children; but it also repeals every pro-life law we’ve ever passed,” said Porter.

According to the Stop HR5 website, nearly 900,000 postcards have been sent to Washington, DC, so far. People have the option of sending the bright orange postcards – reading “WE SAY NO!” – just to their U.S. senators, or they can send postcards to every member of the Senate, the White House, and each justice on the U.S. Supreme Court.

For some lawmakers, it’s a message that biblical values matter to Christian voters. According to Porter, some conservative senators have reached out and expressed their gratitude for the campaign.

“We find often that Christians don’t know where to start,” said Harris. “Our goal is to educate audiences and connect with resources and groups like Faith2Action across the nation to help them impact their own spheres of influence.”

“America is responding; it’s amazing to see,” said Porter. “And it’s going to not only encourage our friends, but I believe it’s going to put the fear of the next election into any senator who faces this.”
