Investment Banking Market Report

Investment banking market has experienced a tremendous growth globally, and is expected to maintain its dominance during the forecast period. Investment banking is a division of a financial institution that provides consulting services to governments, corporations, and institutions in the market. It assists several factors such as capital rising for business expansions, projects, initial public offerings (IPOs) and facilitates mergers and acquisitions (M&A) of corporate companies. It serves as middlemen for creditors and businesses in the market. Several investment banks function on primary brokerage and wealth management facilities in coordination with their investment research enterprises. Investment banks provide services to both security-issuing corporations and securities-buying investors. In addition, investment bankers provide additional data for positioning their securities in the open market for companies, an operation which is very critical to the credibility of an investment bank.
