

Jorge Zavala on Embracing Three Truths: Personal, Political, and Objective

Jorge Zavala Launches Movement to Teach Critical Thinking

FRESNO, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, August 1, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In this article, Jorge Zavala argues that it is important to embrace three truths: personal, political, and objective. He believes that these truths are essential for individuals to navigate through conflicting perspectives and biased information.

Zavala defines personal truths as deeply held beliefs and values. These truths are unique to each individual and allow them to navigate their own lives and make meaningful decisions. Political truths, on the other hand, are shared by a group of people and are based on their shared values and beliefs. These truths can be used to drive collective progress. Finally, objective truths are based on data and skepticism. They are the foundation for scientific progress and informed decision-making.

Zavala also discusses the importance of unity and democracy. He argues that prejudice and discrimination have infiltrated our societal fabric, leading to a diminishing value of individual rights in the eyes of the wealthy few. He also believes that the growing divide between the wealthy and the everyday citizen is hindering progress and stifling self-preservation.

Zavala concludes by urging individuals to exercise their right to vote and believe in themselves. He believes that by doing so, we can collectively make a difference and restore American values. Zavala's arguments are well-reasoned and he provides a clear call to action for individuals to get involved in the political process.
