Sokam Holdings is one of the largest petroleum import companies in the DRC and is engaging with U.S. stakeholders on matters relating to U.S. and Congolese energy security. The stability of the Congolese and U.S. economies and food supply rely on the accessibility and availability of affordable petroleum products. Green energy is the future. Nevertheless, it is essential that until a time when renewable energy can easily be produced, stored, and delivered, appropriate policies and infrastructures should be in place to ensure a steady supply of energy to consumers in the United States and across the African continent.
