"Reviewed By K.C. Finn for Readers' Favorite

Bad, Better, Best: Women and Men in Relationship is a work of non-fiction in the relationship guidance and Christian living subgenres. It is suitable for adult readers and was penned by Margaret Josephson Rinck, who refers to herself as Dr. Meg during the course of the book. As the title suggests, the work focuses on relationships between women and men and explores these dynamics and patterns from a Christian Presbyterian perspective. Based on a series of interesting and insightful lectures, Dr. Meg has developed a work that takes us through bad patterns and game-playing in relationships and identifies ways to behave appropriately to one another, for women and men living in the body of Christ.

Whether they are in a relationship or not, there is much for Christian readers to learn from this work that will help them improve their friendships and romantic prospects, and grow into mature and responsible partners that any other person would be lucky to have. I enjoyed the practical guidance that Margaret Josephson Rinck delivered in this work, which is all about balance within ourselves and with others. The scripture references and biblical ideas posed by the work are well chosen to highlight the core principles of love and harmony, whilst also discussing more modern issues like the balance of power in relationships and co-dependency. Bad, Better, Best is a work that offers a clear organizational structure and an accessible concept backed up by great ideas and good strong values, and it would be a very helpful read indeed for Christians seeking a good model on which to base their relationships."
