Bogee Jr.](#), announces the release of his groundbreaking book, "The Road to Self-Worth: A Book for Disciples," a vital resource for marriages and relationships aimed at ending divorces and family breakups.

In his latest work, Bogee delves deep into the challenges faced by Christian marriages today, emphasizing the crucial role of strong leadership within churches. He argues that a lack of leadership is a significant factor in the prevalence of divorces and family breakups within congregations. His book is a call to action for couples to honor their vows and embrace a love that is spiritual rather than physical.

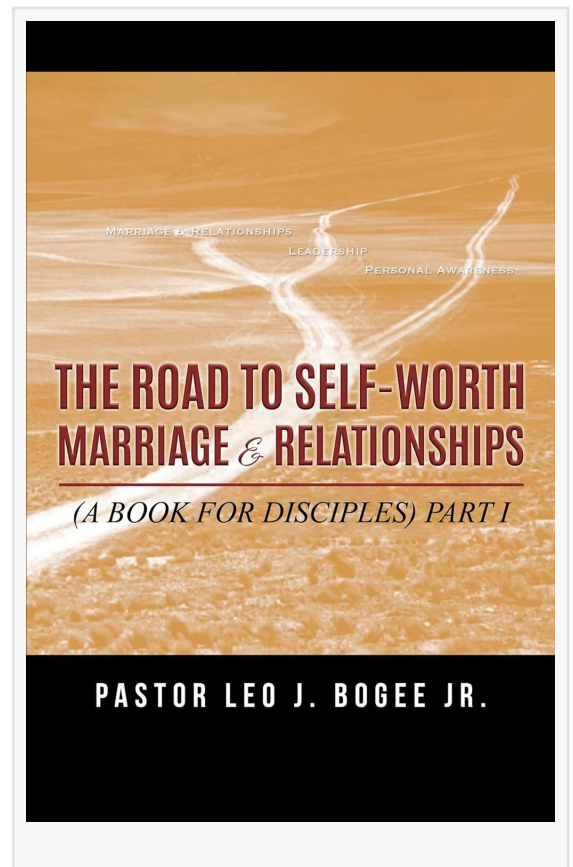

Leo J. Bogee Jr. is a respected figure in the Christian community, known for his insightful teachings and dedication to fostering strong, faith-based relationships. He is also working on the sequel, "The Road to Self-Worth: Leadership," further expanding his influence and thought leadership.

Bogee's motivation for writing "The Road to Self-Worth" stems from his belief that the foundation of marriage lies in the vows made in love. He posits that love is spiritual, not defined by fleeting emotions or physical experiences. He emphasizes that understanding love as a spiritual bond empowers individuals to overcome trials and temptations. "Love God, love your neighbor, and love yourself as you love your neighbor," he asserts, "gives you the power and authority to overcome the devil's tests."

The core message of "The Road to Self-Worth" is the importance of being true to one's word and maintaining that commitment to one's spouse. Bogee underscores that the relationship is sanctified by the Holy Spirit, forming a threefold cord that is not easily broken. He stresses that the Holy Spirit must be removed for a God-centered marriage to break up, advocating for a steadfast commitment to one's spouse and to God.
