payment solution for businesses in the United States, is thrilled to announce the release of its latest credit card feature. This addition allows small and medium-sized businesses to accept card payments for outstanding invoices from their clients, providing greater flexibility and convenience.

Allowing clients to pay by credit card is crucial for small businesses as it offers a versatile payment option that many small businesses prefer. Forwardly customers can also pay business bills to vendors and contractors with cards for no monthly fee. Credit cards offer benefits such as rewards, fraud protection, and the ability to manage cash flow by delaying bill payments. By enabling credit card payments for its users, Forwardly empowers small businesses to cater to their clients' preferences, potentially increasing customer and vendor satisfaction and retention and leading to fewer overdue invoices or bills.

It aligns with Forwardly's mission of simplifying payments and improving financial efficiency for accountants, bookkeepers, and small business users.

"Our mission at Forwardly is to provide small businesses with the tools they need to succeed financially," shares Nick Chandi, CEO and Co-Founder of Forwardly. "In addition to faster payment options such as instant payments and same-day ACH, we are excited to introduce credit card payments, further increasing the financial flexibility available to small businesses."
