ATM-managed services are a range of services offered to financial firms, banks, and other organizations that build and operate ATMs. They streamline operations and provide visibility into the cost, condition, and dependability of the ATM.

The main types of ATM-managed services are ATM replenishment and currency management, network management, security management, incident management, and others. ATM replenishment is the cycle in which the third party hired by the bank removes the leftover money in the machine and replaces it with a fresh load. It is deployed in locations such as onsite ATMs, offsite ATMs, worksite ATMs, and mobile ATMs, and are used for ATM services, CMS, and others.
