Some Key Highlights From the Report

The aquaculture feed premixes segment accounted for largest revenue share in the global feed premixes market in 2022. This is due to rising demand for feed premixes since these help to improve feed efficiency and animal health by minimizing livestock illnesses. Proteins, lipids, vitamins, and minerals are the primary components of fish feed, while protein is an essential nutrition for fish and prawns. The usage of premix in compound feed and aquaculture production has enhanced feed nutritional quality. There are several benefits associated with using aquaculture feed premixes including improved growth performance and feed conversion ratio, reduced mortality, enhanced immune function, and improved reproductive performance.

The powder segment is expected to register steadily fast revenue growth rate in the global feed premixes market during the forecast period. This is due to rising demand for powder feed premixes since these are used to supplement the basic feed with essential vitamins, minerals, amino acids, and other nutrients. Vitamin premix for poultry feed is designed to give optimal nutrition for poultry throughout their productive lives through feeds. Furthermore, these premixes feature fortification levels that match the vitamin needs of chickens in real-time for optimum health and productivity, hence driving revenue growth of this segment.

The online retail segment is expected to account for significantly large revenue share in the global feed premixes market during the forecast period. This is attributed to factors, such as no additional costs, as products can be shipped directly from sellers to the customers. Low product costs and discounts available throughout the year, and online retailers providing detailed product information, such as ingredient lists, nutritional content, and usage instructions, helps consumers to make informed purchasing decisions.

The Asia Pacific market accounted for largest revenue share in the global feed premixes market in 2022. This is due to rising demand and consumption of livestock-based products in countries such as India and China. In addition, increasing feed production and shifts in dietary preferences among individuals are leading to rising consumption of animal-based proteins, which is another factor driving market revenue growth of this region. Moreover, rising strategic initiatives by major companies is also expected to drive market revenue growth during the forecast period.
