

The Annenberg Roundtable Conversations on Politics, Media, and Society at the 2024 Republican National Convention

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, July 8, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The USC Annenberg Center on Communication Leadership and Policy, in partnership with the Annenberg School at the University of Pennsylvania and in collaboration with POLITICO, is pleased to announce three days of open discussions of important domestic and international issues at the 2024 Republican National Convention in Milwaukee.

Scheduled from Tuesday, July 16 to Thursday, July 18, these roundtable discussions will feature leading journalists, international figures, historians, and notable political, social, and academic decision-makers. Inspired by the vision of Walter and Leonore Annenberg, the Annenberg Schools have held discussions on politics, media, and society at the national political conventions since 2000 in addition to one or both schools taking students for experiential learning.

Dates and Location:

Dates: July 16-18, 2024

Location: Milwaukee Marriott Downtown, Wisconsin

About the Program:

The Annenberg Roundtable on Politics, Media, and Society at the National Political Conventions is organized by Geoffrey Cowan and Adam Clayton Powell III of the USC Annenberg Center on Communication Leadership and Policy and by David Eisenhower, Marjorie Margolies, and Craig Snyder of the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School for Communication. Programs will be presented at both the Republican Convention in Milwaukee and the Democratic Convention in Chicago.

The roundtable discussions in Milwaukee will focus on the evolving role of media in political campaigns, election cybersecurity in the age of AI, intraparty dissent in 2024, why history matters, and international perspectives on U.S. politics.
