The annual Purple Dragonfly Book Award contest is a prestigious competition that honors excellence in children’s literature, recognizing outstanding books across various categories. This year, the contest saw an incredible array of entries from talented authors and illustrators worldwide.

“The Trouble with Children (According to Dog)” stands out with its charming storytelling and engaging illustrations. The book provides a whimsical yet insightful look at family dynamics and the special bond between pets and their owners. Katie Weaver’s delightful narrative, complemented by Soylu’s vibrant artwork, has rightfully earned the Grand Prize in this year’s contest.

“Running for Shelter: A True Story,” which Sheft began writing at age 13, is a moving and inspirational true story that recounts her grandmother’s experiences during the Holocaust.
