Subscriptions on all-important social media have doubled in one month, according to publisher Susan Katz Keating.

"This underscores the magazine's ability to resonate with readers hungry for right-now stories about adventure, heroism, survival, and camaraderie," Keating said.

Since taking the helm two years ago, Keating has spearheaded a series of innovative content strategies and editorial improvements, revitalizing the magazine's appeal and broadening its reach. Under her leadership, the magazine has embraced a dynamic approach to storytelling, focusing on topics that captivate and inspire the current demographic.

"Doubling our subscription numbers is a testament to the hard work and dedication of our entire team," Keating said. "Our readers are at the heart of everything we do, and this milestone reflects our unwavering commitment to providing them with content that is worth reading in today's crowded media landscape."

The magazine's editorial team has been instrumental in this success, crafting stories that are both thought-provoking and entertaining. From in-depth features and exclusive interviews to engaging visuals, the publication has focused to meet the evolving interests of its readership.

"We are incredibly grateful to our readers for their support," Keating said. "This achievement motivates us to continue pushing boundaries and delivering exceptional content. We are excited about what the future holds, and remain dedicated to enriching our readers' lives with every story."

Keating places the milestone within the framework of having written for some of the biggest publications in the industry, including PEOPLE and Time magazines.

"The magazine's growth reflects a broader trend in the media industry, where quality content and a strong connection with readers are more important than ever," she said.

Soldier of Fortune is renowned for its dynamic content that captivates readers with compelling narratives from the frontlines of adventure and conflict. From exclusive insights into global hotspots to personal accounts of resilience and bonding, the publication embodies the spirit of exploration and grit that defines our times.

With a legacy spanning decades, the magazine remains a trusted source for those who seek firsthand accounts of courage and survival in the face of adversity.

Keating bought the publication in April 2022, and has spearheaded its growth over the past two years.
