He also emphasized his stance on several key issues, stating, "I am Pro God, Pro Guns, Pro Life, and Pro America First." Snavelly plans to hold town hall meetings across the district to gather concerns and ideas from residents, which will guide his legislative agenda.

"A common complaint that my team and I hear is that constituents cannot reach their senator to get responses to their issues. A number one priority for my office will be to respond to your phone calls and emails in a timely manner and I will do my best to see you when you come to Richmond during the General Assembly," Snavelly assured. Another one of his objectives is to focus on fiscal responsibility and the efficient use of taxpayer money.

Addressing the challenges faced by local farmers, Snavelly pointed to the closure of Tyson Foods processing plant in Cumberland County as an example of the disruptions in the agricultural sector.

"We need to explore promoting small businesses and small business manufacturing groups into the district. Reducing regulations and taxes on small businesses will be one of my priorities," Snavelly said.

With four years of experience working in the Virginia Senate, Snavelly believes he is well prepared to represent District 10 effectively. "My team and I have a strong knowledge of how the Senate operates, how bills are created, and passed", he noted. He also emphasized the importance of building relationships across the aisle to achieve legislative success.

"I want to be a warrior for SD10, but I can't do it alone. I'm going to need help and support to make it happen and I look forward to working with all of you," Snavelly concluded.
