"There's an old saying that goes, 'To whom much is given, much is expected.' Well, I come from a working-class family in a steel mill town in Pennsylvania and I worked hard and I've been blessed for my efforts. I been given much and I have responded by helping people with my money and my time. It has been immensely satisfying," said Malinchak who was sent to Gary, Indiana as part of the TV show in which millionaires live in poor neighborhoods, meet interesting people and donate their own money to help those people. On the TV show, he donated more than $100,000 to several charities and individuals he met.

"One of the great lessons of the TV show is that we need to live with an attitude of gratitude," he said. "There are people in all parts of America who don't have much money, but they are wealthy in spirit. I feel blessed that I was able to help them financially. In many cases, they used the money not for themselves, but to help others. That's a lesson for all of us."
