Surge in Construction Activities to Drive Market Growth
The anticipated growth in the MDF and chipboard market is closely tied to the surge in construction-related activities. Construction activities, which involve the creation of buildings, infrastructure, and various other structures, have seen a significant increase. This rise is driven by factors such as the development of critical infrastructure, technological advancements, and structural changes that are shaping the global economy. MDF and chipboard are integral to construction projects due to their adaptability and cost-effectiveness, enabling their use in a wide range of residential and commercial applications. For instance, according to the United States Census Bureau, the value of construction activities in the U.S. rose from $1,626.4 billion in 2021 to $1,792.9 billion in 2022, reflecting a growth rate of 10.2%. This increase in construction-related activities is a key driver of the MDF and chipboard market.
