Growth Driver Of The Video Intercom Devices Market

The rising demand for security and surveillance is expected to propel the growth of the video intercom device market going forward. Security and surveillance refer to the measures and systems employed to monitor, detect, and respond to potential threats and unauthorized activities, such as robbery and safety concerns, in various environments. The demand for security and surveillance is increasing due to increasing crime rates, terrorism and global threats, urbanization and population growth, cybersecurity threats, and enhancing public safety. Video intercom systems contribute significantly to security and surveillance by providing visual verification, access control, remote monitoring, and integration capabilities, improving the safety and protection of residential, commercial, and institutional premises.
