

Pro Team Works Urges Chicago Residents to Schedule Window Washing Before Cold Weather Arrives

As winter approaches, local companies are shifting focus to gutter cleaning, making this the last chance for window washing services in Chicagoland.

HILLSIDE, IL, UNITED STATES, October 11, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- As the colder months approach, Pro Team Works, a leading provider of professional window cleaning services in Chicagoland, advises homeowners and businesses to schedule their window washing services while weather conditions remain favorable. With winter just around the corner, window washing will soon be less practical, and local cleaning companies will shift their focus to critical gutter cleaning tasks, leaving window washing services harder to schedule.

Owner Paul

Window washing is an essential part of home and building maintenance, and it becomes even more critical after the warmer months. Dust, pollen, and other debris have had the entire spring and summer to accumulate on glass surfaces.

Proper cleaning not only improves the appearance of windows but also helps maintain their structural integrity, preventing damage caused by the buildup of dirt and moisture.

However, as the fall season progresses, the opportunity for effective window washing becomes limited. Temperatures begin to drop, and frost or ice can accumulate, making window cleaning difficult, if not impossible, to perform safely and effectively. Additionally, the focus for many cleaning companies shifts from window washing to gutter cleaning, which becomes a priority during this time of year.

 The Impact of Changing Seasons on Window Cleaning

The shift from warm weather to cold presents several challenges for window washing. As fall temperatures drop, Chicago experiences a wide range of weather conditions, from rain to frost, which can affect the quality of window cleaning services. When windows are washed in cold weather, the water used during cleaning can freeze on the glass, making it difficult to achieve a streak-free finish. This is particularly important for buildings with large glass facades or those in need of deep cleaning after the dusty summer months.

Moreover, once winter weather sets in, with its snow, ice, and frigid winds, outdoor window washing becomes nearly impossible for both residential and commercial properties. Frozen water lines, slippery surfaces, and cold-related safety risks further complicate the process. This leaves residents and business owners with few opportunities to clean their windows until the following spring.

Pro Team Works reminds property owners that maintaining clean windows is not just about aesthetics. Regular cleaning helps extend the life of windows by preventing the buildup of debris, which can cause scratches or damage over time.

Skipping this vital task before winter could result in windows that are more difficult to clean or even damaged, leading to costly repairs in the future.

"With the colder weather on the horizon, it's important to take care of window cleaning now. Once winter sets in, the focus shifts to essential gutter cleaning, and window washing becomes much more difficult to schedule," said Pro Team owner Paul B.

 Gutter Cleaning Takes Priority

Another factor that comes into play as fall progresses is the increased demand for gutter cleaning. As leaves and debris accumulate in gutters, they can become clogged, leading to serious problems like water damage, foundation issues, and ice dams in the winter. Gutter cleaning becomes a critical maintenance task in the fall, and as the season continues, most cleaning companies, including Pro Team Works, will prioritize this service over window washing.

Once the shift is made to focus on gutters, availability for window washing becomes more limited. Pro Team Works encourages property owners to take advantage of the remaining mild weather to schedule window cleaning services before gutter cleaning season is in full swing. Acting now ensures that windows will be clear and bright throughout the fall and winter, enhancing the overall appearance of homes and businesses even during the coldest months.

 Expert Advice for Fall Maintenance

With decades of experience in the cleaning industry, Pro Team Works offers professional insights into how best to maintain homes and commercial buildings during the fall and winter months.
