

'Ellas', Mexican and Spanish art in America by women trailblazers

On November 20th opens a historic exhibit for Miami Art Week in support of International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women

MIAMI, FL, UNITED STATES, November 19, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Ellas: "Them" in Spanish, feminine gender.

The ultimate form of violence towards women is invisibility.

"Gentleness Reached The Warrior" by Gloria Loizaga

Women and young girls don't see themselves in the walls and halls of museums around the world. It is estimated that only 14.9% of the art in major U.S. museums is by women (source: artnet).

Beyond Frida, Georgia, Yayoi, and a few others, where are the women?

They were silently painting, sculpting, creating. Their art rarely publicly shown or known, often labelled as "feminine", ultimately lost and forgotten.

This collection celebrates a new generation of living women artists from Mexico and Spain working in the U.S. who are changing the course of art history by refusing to be defined by their gender. Women trailblazers, invisible no more, defying limits and borders.

Meet them, "Ellas".

Featuring original art by Jimena Cárdenas, Alejandra Cue, Monica Czuckerberg, Paloma Góngora, Angela Gómez Durán, Danié Gomez Ortigoza, Constanza Laguna, Gloria Loizaga, Marcia Lorente Howell, Irene Marzo, Isabella Méndez, Magy Pérez Marrón, Leticia Salama, Serrot, and Susana Villa. Presented by the Consulate Generals of Mexico and Spain in Miami and curated by Surfergirl New York.
