Topher Keene: Mastering the Art and Science of the Human Voice

In a compelling episode, Tell Us a Story sits down with Topher Keene, a Grammy-Award-nominated vocal coach renowned for his work with performers, public speakers, and influencers seeking to unlock the full potential of their voices. Keene's extensive background spans music, acting, keynote speaking, and voice work, making him a leading expert in vocal performance and health. Throughout the episode, Keene delves into the intricacies of vocal anatomy, explaining how understanding the physical mechanics of the voice can drastically improve both vocal health and performance.

Keene offers practical advice for those who think they are "tone-deaf," teaching listeners how to develop pitch accuracy and confidence. His approach blends scientific knowledge with creative techniques, making the art of singing and public speaking accessible to everyone. Keene also discusses the psychological aspects of vocal expression, emphasizing the importance of using one's voice to connect with audiences emotionally and powerfully. His work has impacted a diverse range of clients, from touring musicians and Netflix actors to professional comedians and keynote speakers.

With accomplishments that include performances as a featured soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a YouTube Silver Play Button, and appearances on major networks like MTV, Keene brings a wealth of experience to his coaching. He is also a member of MENSA and the Triple Nine Society, showcasing his exceptional intellect and dedication to continuous learning.

Keene's episode is a must-listen for anyone looking to elevate their communication and performance skills. For more information on his work or to book a coaching session, visit TopherKeene.com.

Adam Sietz: Transforming Communication and Confidence with Humor

The podcast also features Emmy-nominated comedic actor and author Adam Sietz, founder of AdamSietz.com and Big Hug Productions. Sietz is a pioneer in blending humor and improvisational thinking to help professionals improve communication, build confidence, and bring positive energy to the workplace. Known for his work in voice acting, television, and on Broadway, Sietz's career includes roles in Law & Order, The Sopranos, and Broadway productions like The Ritz and Barefoot in the Park.

In his podcast episode, Sietz shares insights from his book, 'Unscripted Success with Improvisational Thinking: Secrets of How to Sell It.' He emphasizes the transformative power of humor in overcoming self-doubt and enhancing communication. Sietz introduces listeners to his innovative concept of "Comedyation," a conflict resolution method that uses laughter to defuse tension and encourage collaboration. He also explains how improvisational techniques can empower entrepreneurs and salespeople to trust their instincts and respond creatively to challenges.

Sietz's deep understanding of human connection through humor makes this episode engaging and insightful. He offers actionable strategies to turn everyday conflicts into opportunities for growth and joy, inspiring listeners to bring more spontaneity and creativity into their personal and professional lives. Sietz's contributions to the world of acting and coaching have left a lasting impact, and his unique approach continues to empower teams and individuals across various industries.
