River. The project transformed an older home with outdated wood siding into a modern, durable and visually striking exterior featuring new stucco and vinyl siding just in one month.

This project was for a newly settled couple eager to turn their house into a dream home. The transformation began with the removal of old wooden siding. ZD Stucco Repair then replaced the outdated materials with a cutting-edge combination of modern vinyl siding and aluminum trim on the back and a sleek new stucco system on the front.

“Our priority was to ensure the structure was not only beautiful but also well-protected,” said Pamela Dicso, CEO of ZD Stucco Repair. “We installed a heavy-duty moisture barrier to safeguard the house against the elements, followed by application of stucco with fiberglass mesh and a medium-texture finish coat. The result is an exterior that looks stunning and is built to withstand time and weather.”

The team also installed precision-cut vinyl siding around the home's sides and rear, perfectly complementing the new white stucco for a cohesive and fresh appearance. Additional upgrades included durable elastic sealant around windows and doors for weather-tight protection, as well as new soffits and gutter systems to enhance functionality and longevity.

The finished project is more than just a facelift – it's a testament to the importance of quality construction. "A project like this isn't just about aesthetics – it's an investment in protecting your home for the long haul," added Pamela Dicso.
