This is our first time attending such an event, and we wanted to show up in a way that allowed us to engage directly with users and influencers who love what we do.”

"Comic Con Argentina is an amazing platform to connect with our community and bring our digital-first brand into the physical space," said Godoberta Gumbakyte, Marketing Manager at Honeygain. "This is our first time attending such an event, and we wanted to show up in a way that allowed us to engage directly with users and influencers who love what we do."

At Comic Con Argentina, Honeygain set up an engaging booth where attendees could interact directly with the brand. The fun and interactive experience not only gave potential users a chance to learn more about the app and its benefits but also allowed Honeygain to engage with dedicated users and creators who have been using the app to earn passive income. The event also provided a platform for meeting influencers in person, making it a unique opportunity to bridge the gap between Honeygain's digital presence and the offline world.

Several of Honeygain's long-time influencers also took part in Comic Con Argentina, giving Honeygain the chance to connect and collaborate with them. These influencers, who have been using Honeygain to earn passive income, shared their experiences and enthusiasm with attendees, helping to spread the word about the app even further.

Honeygain's participation was made possible with the help of dedicated agencies who supported the brand at the event. Their assistance was instrumental in making Honeygain's first offline experience a success.
