Stylist Highlights the Connection Between Self-Image and Spiritual Identity in New Initiative: Graceology-Simple Stories for the Curious Soul.

FRANKLIN, TN, UNITED STATES,

EINPresswire.com/ -- In a culture often consumed by outward appearances and self-improvement, wardrobe stylist Libby Jason is bringing a fresh and holistic approach to personal style. Drawing on years of experience in helping women feel confident in their clothing choices, Libby has observed a striking trend: many women experience a disconnect or dissatisfaction with their bodies. While they may not actively dislike their appearance, feelings of inadequacy—wishing to be thinner, prettier, or “better” in some way—persist.

“As a woman, I completely understand those feelings,” says Libby. “But through my work and personal journey, I’ve realized that a key to improving how we see ourselves—and ultimately our self-worth—lies in transforming our relationship with our creator. The One who made each of us unique can provide a new lens through which to appreciate our identities.”

Let your light shine before men that they see your good works and glorify your Father in heaven”

Matthew 5:16 (NIV)

The initiative invites women to explore how deepening their spiritual identity can help reshape their perspectives on beauty, worth, and self-confidence. By merging faith and fashion, Libby Jason aims to help individuals cultivate both outer and inner transformation.

For those curious to know more about the gospel but may be hesitant to be bombarded with “Christian-eze”, this book is a gentle conversation starter found in the stories of everyday life.
