The much-anticipated space is located in Seattle's Sunset Hill neighborhood

Executive Chef and Restaurateur Brian Clevenger's newest restaurant – ELDR – has officially opened in Seattle's Sunset Hill neighborhood. ELDR, meaning fire in Old Norse, draws inspiration from live-fire cooking, focusing on exceptional proteins and fire-grilled seasonal produce.

The menu is a celebration of simplicity and quality, featuring standout dishes that showcase the best of local and sustainable ingredients. Starter highlights include Smoked Scallop Crudo, Grilled Rapini, Roasted sunchokes and Fennel pollen, and entrées span from Black Cod and Pork Sausage to shareables like Half Duck and 24 oz Steak for two. A special chef's tasting menu is available for $86 for 4 courses.

The intimate space seats 36 and offers daily happy hour menus from 5-6pm and 9-10pm. True to the ethos of other General Harvest Restaurants, the new concept embraces sustainable, fresh, local, and seasonal ingredients while crafting unique flavor profiles.

"We're excited to bring something new to Sunset Hill," said Clevenger. "This restaurant is all about celebrating the essence of live-fire cooking, and we're looking forward to showcasing the
