NETHERLANDS, December 16, 2024 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Boys of Orange are a brand-new boy band with a unique composition; four businessman friends who decided it was time to have more fun instead of just focusing on their careers or simply living life. The group consists of Kevin Brouwer, Ed van Drie, Albert Weerman, and Peter ter Harmsel. Their main goal is to reach the masses, create a party, and foster a sense of unity with sing-along songs. "Standing on stage together creates an incredible energy that the audience responds to with enthusiasm".

Media personality Kevin Brouwer, known from various RTL 4 and SBS 6 shows, along with his friends, had the courage to chase their dreams and undergo a remarkable transformation. The band quickly agreed on the name. "We're Dutch, so from Orange, and we always want to stay boys at heart. Orange also has a certain elegance; it refers to the royal family, but also to football and sports, or the 'Orange feeling' that appeals to us and to the Netherlands!".

The quartet thinks big, and their motto is "If we do something, we do it well." They have a strong desire to be unique, as there is currently no similar act, especially not at their age. "We are the only male group of this kind. We understand that we need to start in the Netherlands, but conquering foreign markets in English or German is definitely a goal. The name Boys of Orange will resonate globally", the men say.

Their repertoire consists of sing-alongs with a strong beat. The music produced so far, by Emile Hartkamp and John Dirne, is commercial, energetic, with modern beats, 'danceable', often bombastic, and full of emotion. In their new single Dolce Vita, produced by Jay van den Berg (Vengaboys), the boys show off their swinging side with a wink to disco.
