Jim Winn, owner of Comfort Keepers in Southern Jersey, emphasizes the significance of this partnership, noting that veterans often face unique challenges when adjusting to life after service, including physical disabilities, mental health concerns, and feelings of isolation. "Veterans have sacrificed so much for our country, and it's our privilege to offer them the care and attention they need as they age," said Winn.

The partnership will give veterans a well-rounded care approach that holistically addresses their needs. Social workers will work closely with Comfort Keepers' caregivers to create personalized care plans that support the physical aspects of daily living and focus on mental health, social connection, and overall quality of life.

The aim is to ensure veterans feel respected, valued, and empowered in their homes, with access to the resources they need to thrive.

Veterans often face challenges that extend beyond traditional caregiving, such as coping with post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), depression, or the effects of physical injuries. By partnering with social workers, Comfort Keepers in Southern Jersey can ensure that these needs are addressed in a compassionate and comprehensive manner. Social workers will provide regular assessments and check-ins, helping veterans navigate the complexities of aging while offering emotional support and guidance.
