The summit will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., featuring dynamic sessions designed to encourage collaboration, establish policy goals, and craft actionable strategies for meaningful change.

“This moment represents a new Reconstruction of America,” said Gary Chambers, a renowned activist from Baton Rouge, Louisiana. “It’s an opportunity to rethink and rebuild systems that have historically marginalized Black men. By uniting fresh ideas with bold leadership, we can lead the charge in building a more equitable and inclusive future.”

Dr. Jamal Bryant, Senior Pastor of New Birth Missionary Baptist Church, emphasized the importance of the summit as a platform for solutions. “Black men have always been catalysts for change in America. Yet, we remain underrepresented in positions of power. This summit is more than just a conversation—it’s a transformative call to action. It’s time to turn discussions into solutions that uplift our communities and honor the resilience and leadership embedded in our legacy.”
