Will Crudge, a retired Army veteran, husband, father, and animal enthusiast, brings a unique perspective to his writing. When he's not crafting tales of splendor and wonderment, he's navigating a neurotypical world through the lenses of his neurodivergent eyes. With a supportive network of friends and family, he finds solace in gaming, reading, maintaining his old truck, and amusing an elderly labradoodle and a flock of parakeets.

Despite years of hiatus due to personal obligations and other priorities, Will Crudge has returned to the writer's chair with a renewed commitment. He's here to stay, ready to share more stories with his readers. He resides in the upstate of South Carolina, a place he cherishes, with his fantastic wife, Katherine, and his platoon of adoring children. Their love and support are his pillars of strength, making every day a new adventure.

The Blood and Metal series is now available in print, eBook, and audiobook formats at major retailers and online platforms.
