What Factors are Driving the Growth of The Bayrab Market?

A fundamental growth driver of the bayrab market is the increasing incidence of rabies, a deadly disease affecting the central nervous system and primarily transmitted through the bite or saliva of infected animals. Rising cases of rabies are due to factors such as a lack of awareness, insufficient vaccination programs, and limited access to post-exposure prophylaxis, especially in developing regions. The administration of Bayrab after exposure to the rabies virus aids the body in developing an immune response that reduces the virus's likelihood of spreading, offering protection to individuals who have been bitten or otherwise exposed.
