As February continues, this matchup highlights the legacy of excellence in HBCU athletics and the rich history of SIAC basketball. These programs have shaped future pros and continue to build on the tradition of Black college sports. HBCU GO is proud to celebrate Black History Month by showcasing the best of HBCU culture and sports all month long.

When it comes to SIAC West dominance, Miles and Tuskegee have owned the division for the last six years. Tuskegee has won four of the last six SIAC West titles, including a perfect 19-0 conference season in 2022-2023 on their way to the SIAC Championship. Brittney Bolin (11.4 PPG) and Jasmine Manuel (6.7 RPG) lead the charge for the Golden Tigers, who hold a commanding 13-2 record against Miles since 2020.

However, Miles College enters as the reigning SIAC Tournament Champions and is hungry to keep their momentum going. Last season, they made history with a school-record 23 wins and claimed their first-ever SIAC Tournament title. They're led by Preseason SIAC Player of the Year Imeyah Harris, a DII All-American, and Preseason SIAC Defensive Player of the Year Madison Lee. With bragging rights and playoff positioning on the line, this game promises to be a battle.

Men's Game:

On the men's side, Miles College has been the gold standard of the SIAC West, winning six straight division titles and three tournament championships in the last five years. Preseason SIAC Player of the Year Alvin Miles, last season's Newcomer of the Year and First-Team All-SIAC, has been the centerpiece of their success. He's joined by Preseason All-SIAC Second Teamer Corey Trotter, making this a team built to win.

Tuskegee, however, is determined to shift the power dynamic and snap its 4-10 record against Miles since Head Coach Fred Watson's arrival. They claimed Kusame Draper, who will be a key factor in their push for an upset.

With Miles looking to extend their dynasty and Tuskegee fighting to reclaim conference glory, expect an intense SIAC showdown. Viewers can experience the action of Women's and Men's hoops from the SWAC, CIAA, SIAC, and more with veteran sports analyst and commentary from James Hadnot, Nia Symone, and Tim Scarborough. HBCU GO is proud to celebrate HBCU excellence all month long with live coverage of some of the biggest games in Black college sports.
