The demand for bicycles increased during the Covid-19 pandemic due to rise in health consciousness among consumers and preference for bicycles as economical means to exercise and travel short distances. Low maintenance cost of bicycles and ample health benefits drive the growth of the global bicycle market. However, low demand for electric bikes from developing nations and limited use of bicycle during unfavorable climate hinder the market growth. On the other hand, surge in adoption of outdoor sports and technological advancements present new opportunities in the coming years.

The global bicycles market is poised for significant growth, driven by their versatile use in sports, travel, and leisure activities. Bicycles are prized for their low maintenance, fuel-saving, and time-efficient attributes, making them accessible to individuals of all ages. Manufacturers are keenly observing market trends and integrating innovations into upcoming models, including lightweight aluminum and carbon bodies, aerodynamic designs for enhanced speed, and long-lasting batteries. These advancements are made available at reasonable prices, ensuring wider accessibility.

Additionally, bicycle associations play a pivotal role in market expansion by organizing rallies and sports events that encourage membership and promote cycling as a healthy and enjoyable activity. Consequently, consumers increasingly view bicycles as tools for exercise and recreation, fostering positive growth in the global market.

Bicycle sports is an ongoing trend in the market. Countries such as the U.S., Paris, and China are some of the leaders in bicycle sports. With surge in demand for bicycles, manufacturers are developing and elevating sports bikes that are light in weight, wheels with strong grip, strong breaks, and aerodynamic design, thus enhancing the cycling experience. In addition, sports bicycles are used in mountain riding and off-road riding as well. This not only promotes bike sports but also provides users with a thrill and adventurous experience. These bicycle trends leads to the rise in bicycle market demand.

The non-cargo electric bike segment was the highest contributor to the market, with $12,712.4 million in 2019, and is estimated to reach $17,580.4 million by 2027, at a CAGR of 4.1% during the forecast period.
