"School Board Leadership: The Right Way" is a timely release given the Trump administration's proposal to dismantle the U.S.

Department of Education."

The new book provides a comprehensive, fact-based resource for all 95,000 school board members nationwide. It presents an alternative approach to the often one-sided training offered by state organizations and the National School Boards Association (NSBA).

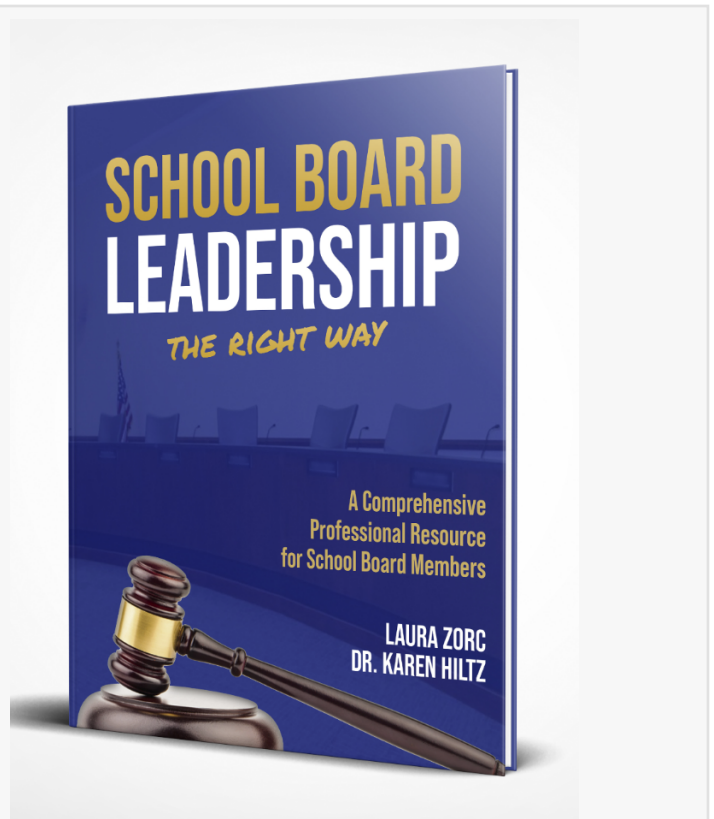

A timely release considering the Trump administration's proposed changes to dismantle the U.S. Department of Education: the book addresses important must-know topics reinforcing the board's roles and responsibilities, such as onboarding new members, fiduciary duties, and budgeting. Its goal is to empower school board members to lead effectively, emphasizing accountability, transparency, and active engagement while considering their state laws, powers, and authority.

In conjunction with the launch of a 43-chapter book, Best in Ed will kick off a weekly YouTube training series that spans 43 weeks, starting in February. Laura Zorc describes the book as a labor of love, drawing from experience serving on a school board and mentoring over 1,000 school board members since 2021.

Dr. Karen Hiltz adds that while the book is intended for school board members, it also benefits candidates, parents, and advocates for school choice by clarifying their roles and responsibilities.
