

Life Science Cartoon Illustrates "The Biology of Valentines"

The real biology of Homo sapiens love, and there are more than two options.

SEATTLE, OR, UNITED STATES, February 24, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Info.Resource, owner and publisher of LifeScienceHistory.com, announced the release of its newest cartoon: "The Biology of Valentines" illustrating how cupids with their hormonal arrows of love target multiple loving couples - estrogen and testosterone - as they travel through the milestones of life.

Biologically, love is a function of several different hormones such as the familiar oxytocin known as the love hormone, but also include dopamine, norepinephrine, serotonin and vasopressin, all illustrated in the "Biology of Valentines."

The cartoons are conceived by Phil Ness, Founder and CEO of Info.Resource and illustrated by Mark Reeve, an award-winning cartoonist, previously with The Mail On Sunday, who has done work for The Economist, GQ, and DC Comics.

"I have always appreciated cartoons that bring a smile to my face," says Ness, "and my goal is to do the same using a science twist with nuggets of factual information hidden in the small detail." The Initial cartoons known as "Toons & Teasers" on LifeScienceHistory.com, chronicle the COVID-19 Pandemic in the U.S. from the drawing of political battle lines, the COVID wave and PPE distribution to the vaccine rollout, COVID vacations and remembrance of the fallen.

The defense of "Science & Reason," the topic of Ness' very first cartoon, received the 2021 Davenport International Cartoon Contest People's Choice Award. The topic is now front and center in the news again and was the subject of his first cartoon in 2025 with an updated cast of characters and many new issues to face.

Other cartoons spotlight CRISPR and DNA technology, evolution, infectious disease, lifesaving vaccines, leading scientists, milestones in science and other topics. Info.Resource is a Seattle based company that previously owned and published a specialized nationwide network of state- and province-based life science web sites.
