The group says, "Construction workers in Florida and nationwide probably had routine exposure to asbestos on the job if they were working on jobsites before the mid-1980s. Many to most construction products used before 1983 contained asbestos including insulation, roofing material, concrete, plumbing systems, furnaces, air conditioning equipment, water tanks, electrical equipment as well as flooring material. Some types of construction workers would have similar levels of asbestos exposure as a shipyard worker. Mesothelioma and asbestos exposure lung cancer can only develop if a person is exposed to asbestos.
