Dr. Chris Giauque joins SPP Dental Partners, bringing dentist-driven ownership model to Utah.

With its latest expansion, SPP Dental Partners now has affiliated practices across Utah, Idaho, Nevada, California, and Washington. The group continues to offer dentists a better path

The main reason I joined was the financial upside. I stay in control of my practice and have the chance to grow my wealth as more practices join. That just doesn't exist in the traditional DSO model.”

forward—one that contrasts with conventional Dental Support Organization (DSO) models, which often require doctors to sell their practices and transition to W-2 employees. Instead, SPP's unique model allows dentists to retain majority ownership, maintaining control over their practice's future while benefiting from enhanced financial and operational support.

“As more dentists seek alternatives to traditional DSOs, SPP offers a model that prioritizes autonomy, practice support, and unique wealth-building opportunities,” said Dr. Weston Spencer, CEO of SPP. “We're excited to welcome Dr.

Giauque and Giauque Family Dental as our first Utah partner, marking another step in our mission to champion private practice dentistry.”

By allowing dentists to maintain ownership, SPP Dental Partners ensures that private practitioners can continue to compete and thrive in an increasingly consolidated industry. The partnership provides the benefits of a larger network—such as shared resources, business support, and strategic guidance—while keeping decision-making power in the hands of the dentists themselves.
