"Pacific Summer" is a love letter to the Northwest lifestyle, with lyrics that bring to life sandy beaches and epic moments with great people. "I love the Northwest in the summertime—a place where you can go where the people so kind," Quincy Q raps in the track, showcasing his knack for blending personal storytelling with universal appeal. "Pacific Summer" is much more than just a song—it's an annual call to embrace the season's best moments." Quincy Q shares, "This is the city where you got to be - Seattle is the place where you got to see," inviting all listeners to join him on a journey through the region's golden days.

Directed by Joshua Bates and Quincy Newsom, the "Pacific Summer" video was filmed at the picturesque Golden Gardens Beach in Seattle, WA, capturing the essence of a sun-soaked day in the Pacific Northwest. Featuring Wanz—best known for his standout performance on Macklemore & Ryan Lewis' global hit "Thrift Shop"—the collaboration brings together two Seattle-area talents for an irresistible sound that's ready to dominate playlists every summer.

Quincy Q, born Quincy Louis Newsom in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and now a proud resident of Everett, Washington, has been steadily building his legacy in the hip-hop world. Inspired by icons like Master P and Sean Combs, he founded Music Nation Live over a decade ago, a top platform and launchpad for incredible emerging artists. Following the success of his debut EP "Down for My Clic" and the viral single "Where I Wanna Be," Quincy Q continues to push boundaries with his forward-thinking signature sound and vibrant entrepreneurial spirit.

The "Pacific Summer" music video marks another milestone for Quincy Q and Music Nation Live, showcasing his evolution as an artist and label head.
