What Drives The Oencia Abatacept Drug Market Growth?

selectively modulating T-cell activation, reducing inflammation, and preventing joint damage, contributing to the control of disease progression, improving quality of life, and minimizing the need for other immunosuppressive treatments for illnesses like rheumatoid arthritis and psoriatic arthritis.

Of note is the incidence of autoimmune diseases in Germany in 2020 when among some 73 million insured individuals, over 6 million were diagnosed with at least one autoimmune disease, resulting in a raw prevalence rate of 8.61%. This rising prevalence of autoimmune diseases is a crucial driver of market growth.

Secondly, the growth of personalized medicine is projected to boost the market. Personalized medicine, a medical approach that adapts treatment and healthcare strategies to individual patient characteristics, like their genetic makeup, environment, and lifestyle, offers more effective and precise results. The Orenzia abatacept drug aligns with this approach by providing targeted immunotherapy, modulating T-cell activation, and allowing healthcare providers to tailor treatment plans to individual patient profiles, disease severity, and medication response, ensuring more effective and customized care for those with autoimmune disorders.

For example, in 2023, it was reported that in 2022, the FDA approved personalized medicines for 34% of new drugs and over the last eight years, they had won approval for at least 25% of new drugs. This rise in personalized medicine is a driving force for market growth.
