

NHuS³ Media Launches Production Studio Focused on Execution, Not Talk

We're both energized by the opportunity to help others bring their stories to life—and to do it in a way that's grounded, collaborative, and results-driven.”

creative studio focused on film and television production, has officially launched with an original slate of projects already in development. Based in Dallas, Texas, the studio is co-founded by Andrew White and Jerry Joyner—two distinctly skilled partners whose combined vision brings together design-driven execution and people-centered strategy.

NHuS³ Media enters the market with a clear objective: to turn creative ideas into well-crafted, measurable outcomes for clients, collaborators, and audiences alike. The company's focus spans across documentary series, unscripted television, and narrative formats—each treated as its own canvas, shaped with intention from concept to screen.

“This isn't about chasing trends or adding noise to the industry,” said Andrew White, Co-Founder of NHuS³ Media. “It's about executing work that's clear, aligned, and built to last. Jerry and I come from different sides of the creative process, but together, we bring the full picture to life.”

The timing of NHuS³ Media's debut is deliberate. With the media landscape more fragmented than ever, creators and brands alike are seeking partners who can simplify the process while preserving the story. NHuS³ Media offers that clarity—functioning as both a production house and a creative partner. Early projects include a cultural docuseries focused on regional entrepreneurship, an unscripted show centered on alternative wellness, and a scripted concept now in early development.

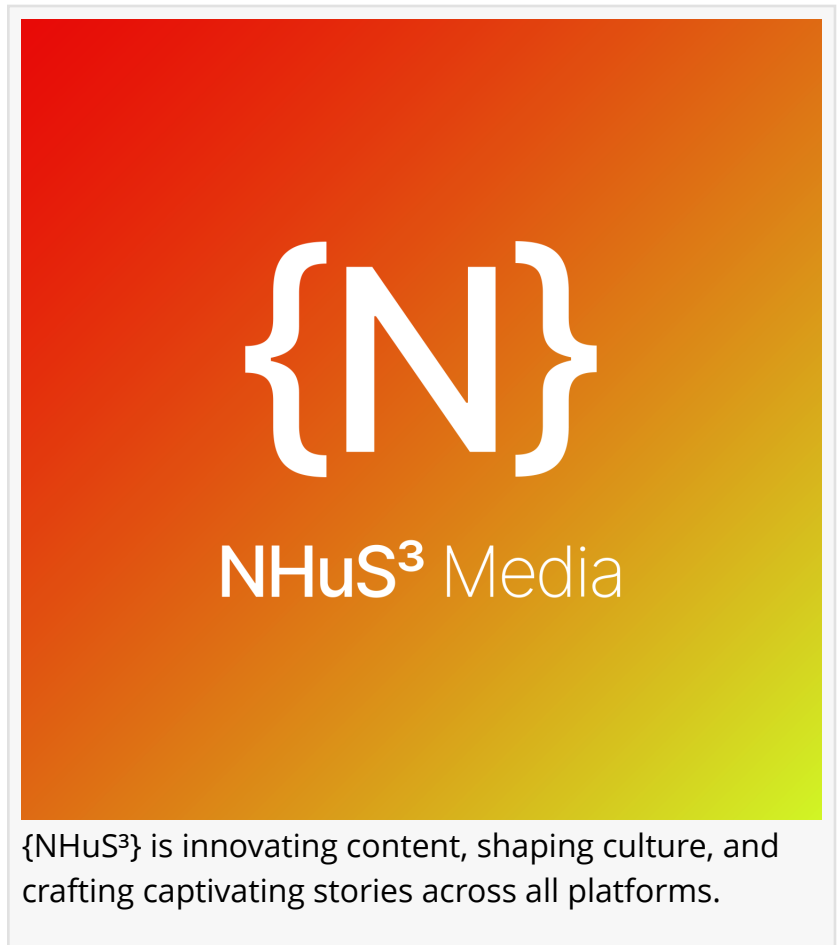

“Andrew is the creative force, and I'm the one who makes sure the right people see it,” added Co-Founder Jerry Joyner. “We're both energized by the opportunity to help others bring their stories to life—and to do it in a way that's grounded, collaborative, and results-driven.”

More than a studio, NHuS3 Media is a reflection of two different strengths working in harmony. That balance—between strategy and imagination, storytelling and structure—is what drives the studio forward.
